WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12

Opening: Rochelle Goldberg at Miguel Abreu Gallery

Most think of the white-cube gallery as lifeless and cold, but any space hosting a show with Rochelle Goldberg's sculptural installations probably wouldn't fit that bill. Her work tends to take the form of environments—sometimes literally—featuring what appear to be animals slicked with black, shiny oil, and often including elements that grow. (For a recent Whitney Museum show, Goldberg planted chia seeds in her installation. By the end of the exhibition, the museum's floor appeared to have sprouted.) With their combinations of organic and inorganic elements, Goldberg's work explores how nature can appear in places where we least expect. Her new show, "Intralocutors," will feature new work.

Miguel Abreu Gallery, 88 Eldridge Street, 4th Floor, 6–8 p.m.
